Thank you very much for submitting your formative Research presentation proposal on time.

Your question reflects a pertinent subject for study. Just ensure that the actual Research Proposal presentation is completely focused and that you don't give yourself too broader research context. And so ensure that tangents don't emerge in the context.

Good to see the that you have aims and objectives as follows:

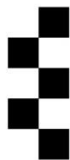

Aims and Objectives

Research and attempt to build an active defense strategy for airport OT networks addressing:

- OT vulnerability management
- Insider threats
- Cyber security awareness
- OT honeypots
- OT cyber security architecture

As discussed engage preliminary research around your proposed aims above and see how that comes together bearing in mind you only have 15 minutes to present. You may for example go into deeper research for a couple of these aims and objectives but then draw some of the other aspects through from a more periphery context, [and so mention them to enhance discussion, debate and comparison where appropriate but don't go into deep detail].

Please note, this summative is secondary research only, as discussed in seminars do not interview/survey people from a primary research perspective – you will engage in primary research in your Capstone project when there is ample time to go through the ethics and consent process in that project but for the purposes of this summative please just engage with existing secondary research from books, publications etc, we have spoken about this extensively in seminars, with this information also being detailed in your unit 10 online hub.

Noted for your time line, you appear to be looking forward to a capstone project, and so please make this clear in your summative, otherwise you can reflect a time line for this Research Proposal Presentation to show how and when you developed this content over a period of time.

The formative is professionally laid out with the correct font which is good practice.

With best wishes

Karen
